“Just as the chemist cannot create life, neither can he create a complex vitamin: the life element in foods and nutrition . . . The synthetic vitamins he creates on the basis of chemical formulae bear as much resemblance to the real thing as a robot does to a living man, lacking an elusive quality that chemistry cannot supply.”

Dr. Royal Lee (1895-1967)

Inventor, Scientist, and Founder of Standard Process.

We Are One

As an integral part of our evaluation procedure to determine what might best help you, we examine various parts of your body - skin, muscle, nerves - to understand the health of the other organs and glands of your body. We can do this because all the body's parts are functionally connected to each other and one part reflects another. In this issue we explain why.

In a microscopic world with an ideal environment, cells from two humans merge into oneness.

This new creation uniting the cells of two parents follows an exact orderliness, guided by an ancient blueprint.

Soon after conception this new creation begins to double and double again and again with the DNA “blueprints” maintaining order. Through each multiplication this new creation remembers its oneness.

All the “parts” of this embryo retain their organic unity even while the cells are rapidly differentiating. One part supports all the others, any one part reflects the whole, until this original one cell develops into that which has never before existed, the individual and unique YOU, in a miraculous 270 days!

Oneness and Wholeness is Maintained Throughout

Looking into the inner workings of this growing, soon-to-be human, we note one aspect of this new creation is destined to become a brain and spinal cord with unnumbered visible and invisible connections of nerve tissues unifying all 3 trillion cells of the human body.

Another part of the “one” differentiates into a digestive system, from top to bottom perfectly created to digest and assimilate nature's blessing of wholesome foods.

Yet another part transforms into the skeletal system, muscles, ligaments and connective tissues to provide locomotion, protection and support to the body.

So it goes throughout the body, single cells dividing repeatedly, forming cells that continue to divide to become entire systems of organs and glands. Skin forms to cover and protect the whole, and the nervous system maintains its connection to each cell in the body. No matter how far removed from the brain, always and forever these trillions of cells maintain their unity.

Every “Part” of the Body Reflects the Whole

Reflections of Organ Health All Over the Body

Although appearing different and located at the extreme ends of the body, these differentiated cells forming the heart, nerves, muscles, skin, feet, hands, face, eyes, brain and digestive system remain organically integrated and connected.

Based on this oneness we have reflections of all the internal organs and glands on the outside of the body. There is a reflection of the heart in every part of the body - the foot, hand, spine, chest, head and eyes. Each segment of the spine and its relative nerves connect to organs of our body, reflecting their function. Similarly, every other organ and gland of our body is reflected in other tissues - in muscles and in the skin of the body and skull - all in perfect orderliness.

What Makes Our Office Different

At our office, we see the many reflections of the whole as one body system telling the able “listener” what is going on inside the body. This integrated approach is our expertise. This view of the whole body connections is what sets us apart from those who see the body as though it has been divided up into specialties and merely treat symptoms as they pop up here and there.

Viscero-Somatic Connections

- Pain in the back?
Could be digestion organs calling out for healing with digestive enzyme support. (see lesson 3)
- Pain in the leg?
It could be the need for probiotics in the large intestines (see lesson 5) or perhaps you need more “greens” in your diet - or both!
- Pain in the chest or abdomen?
Could signs of nutritional deficiency and/or a rib or spinal segment irritating nerves to the organs of the abdominal region. (see lesson 2)

In our office we see all aspects of the one “you” reflected in your body structure, body chemistry, emotions and mental capacity.

- Biochemical imbalance? - Could be caused by structural imbalance.
- Emotional imbalance? Could mean biochemical imbalance.
- Structural aches and pains? - Could be the need for nutritional essentials, chiropractic care, exercise.

Our purpose is to serve your wholeness and help you reconnect the varied parts of yourself to reach the best level of health, harmony and balance of the ONE you. We use all the diagnostic skills we believe are necessary to determine how best to serve your health building needs and give your body what it needs to perform to it’s best.
